Streamlining the Training of Professional Talent and Enhancing Smart Enforcement Efficiency

The Administrative Enforcement Agency held the Joint Graduation Ceremony for the 18th Training Program for Administrative Enforcement Officers and the Opening Ceremony for the 19th Training Program

The Administrative Enforcement Agency (AEA), Ministry of Justice, held the Joint Graduation Ceremony for the 18th Administrative Enforcement Officer Training Program and Opening Ceremony for the 19th Program at 3:00 p.m. on March 2, 2026 (Monday) at the Ministry of Justice. Minister Cheng Ming-Chien personally presided over the certificate presentation, awarding graduation certificates to the trainees of the 18th program and trainee identification certificates to those of the 19th program. The ceremony was conducted in a solemn yet warm atmosphere, highlighting the significance of professional continuity and generational succession in administrative enforcement.

In his remarks, Minister Cheng first congratulated the trainees of the 18th Administrative Enforcement Officer Training Program on successfully completing their training and welcomed the new trainees of the 19th program to join the administrative enforcement team of the Ministry of Justice. He noted that Administrative Enforcement Officers play an indispensable role within the nation's rule-of-law system, bearing the responsibility of realizing public authority and safeguarding social justice. To cultivate outstanding legal professionals for the country, the AEA has designed a rigorous one-year training program. In addition to offering a diverse range of professional and practical training courses taught by experienced lecturers, outstanding Chief Administrative Enforcement Officers or Administrative Enforcement Officers are assigned as mentors during the practical training period to pass on valuable enforcement experience. Furthermore, trainees are also arranged to participate in the Legal Affairs Personnel Training Program at the Academy for the Judiciary and in training programs at the Training Institute of the Ministry of Finance, where they study alongside legal affairs and financial personnel, thereby making full use of inter-agency teaching resources and broadening their learning perspectives.

Minister Cheng also encouraged all trainees by emphasizing that administrative enforcement represents the “last mile” in realizing fairness and justice. In their future careers, they will face various challenges—from firmly enforcing against malicious major debtors to assisting in the disposal of illicit gains of criminal groups in accordance with government policies, all of these responsibilities require proactive commitment and dedicated performance of duty. While upholding the dignity of the rule of law, they should also embody the spirit of “humane enforcement” by extending support to disadvantaged groups in society, thereby implementing the Ministry of Justice’s principle of balanced firmness and compassion in law enforcement and making administrative enforcement a field of legal practice imbued with both authority and humanity. In addition, in response to the trend of technological advancement, the AEA has in recent years actively promoted AI-enabled smart enforcement measures, utilizing technological tools to enhance the efficiency and accuracy of case handling. The Minister expressed the hope that the new trainees will devote themselves fully to learning during the one-year training program, strengthen their professional knowledge and skills, and, after completing the program, make good use of technological tools to further improve administrative enforcement effectiveness and enhance the overall quality of law enforcement.

The ceremony was followed by remarks from trainees of the 18th program, who shared their experiences and reflections during the training period. Trainees of the 19th program then introduced themselves one by one, demonstrating their determination to formally embark on the training program. Director-General Miao also noted that the trainees possess outstanding academic and professional backgrounds, warmly welcoming them to join the enforcement team. He encouraged all trainees—whether currently undergoing training or about to be assigned to their respective posts—to make the most of the training resources, demonstrate their professional capabilities, and work together to contribute to the maintenance of social fairness and justice and the continued development of the nation's rule of law.
